- Galati is a provincial capital of Rumania and has a population of more than 90,000 of whom approximately 90 percent are Rumanians. In 1940, the population reached 100,000, but many fled during World War II and did not return. The city has experienced a limited degree of industrial development since World War II: the shipyards were expanded, a chain and bearings plant was erected, and the former Titan-Calan-Nadrage plant became the Cristea Nicolae rolling mills.
- The following changes in street names are reported:

3. Industrial installations in Galati include the following:

- a. The Galati shipyards (Santierul Naval Galati) are composed of the former Fernie, Santierul Marinei and Neptun shipyards. The first two are located at 2 Strada Sualupeii. The last is now the Portul Rosu Shipyard. Close to 4,000 workers are employed at the S.N.G. in the building of tugs, fishing boats and tankers and in the repair of small passenger vessels, with Soviet orders providing the shipyards with most of their work. The director of the shipyards is a Soviet citizen.
- b. The port stretches along Strada 13 Iunie 1916, and, besides the port installations, contains the following objectives:
 - 1) NAVROM offices
 - 2) Merchant Marine Headquarters
 - 3) Frontier Guard barracks
 - 4) A transformer station
 - 5) Grain-loading pier

The port is used mainly by Soviet vessels bringing metal ores and industrial equipment and by Turkish ships carrying lumber. The main item exported through the port is also lumber.
- c. The sorting station for iron ores (Statie De Asortare a Minereului) brought from the USSR is near the village of Larga.
- d. The Cristea Nicolae plant is bounded by Strada 13 Iunie 1916, Strada Ana Ipatescu and Strada Garii Nr.8, and produces galvanized and ungalvanized sheet-metal in thicknesses up to 1.5 mm. New rolling mills for the production of ungalvanized sheet-metal were erected in recent years. The plant employs about 1,500 workers in three shifts.
- e. The thermal power station is located on Strada Garii Nr.8. The city was connected to the national grid in 1959 and uses AC at 220 V. Of late the supply of electric current has been free of breakdowns.
- f. The waterworks are on the shore of the Danube River in the southwestern part of Galati.
- g. The machine-tractor station is on Strada Aurel Vlaicu at the corner of Bulevardul Gheorghe Cosbuc.

4. Railways: The passenger station and freight station No. 8 occupy their pre-war sites. The railroad between Larga and Giugiuilesti (the first station on the Soviet side of the frontier) has broad-gauge tracks. The Larga station is equipped with facilities for the transfer of freight from Soviet to Rumanian trains and for the replacement of broad-gauge wheels by regular-gauge wheels.
